(A) INTRODUCTION.

The data in this collection has been gathered from many reliable sources. It is rather meagre for such a large family as the Graham family. A complete Genealogy of the Graham family would comprise probably over a thousand or two thousand pages and would cost several thousand dollars.

We have aimed to include in this small volume such material of a general character as would be of the greatest interest and importance to the average member of the family. No attempt is made at an index, but if the reader will peruse all chapters of the volume, he (or she) will find much data of interest. See Chapter (B) re the Coat of Arms.

Unless otherwise plainly shown, the persons in this volume who bear a number of three figures, are sons of the immediately preceding persons bearing preceding consecutive numbers, accompanied by the same letter of the alphabet. All persons in the same group, bearing the same letter as a part of the number, are related.

The generations of the descendants of Grahams bearing numbers of three figures are represented as follows:

Generations:	1st	2nd	3rd	4th	5th
Symbols:	(1), etc.	(A), etc.	(a), etc.	1, etc.	A, etc.
Gen:	6th	7th	8th	9th	10th
Symbols:	a, etc.	(I), etc.	(i), etc.	I, etc.	i, etc.

A single date standing alone (Except in Chapter (G)), unless otherwise shown, represents date of birth; the second of two dates represents date of death.

ABBREVIATIONS: Ab., about; ad., address; b., born; ch., child, children; d., died; dau., daughter; desc., descendant(s), descendant; d.w.i., died without issue; d.y., died young; ld., lived; res., resides, residence; s., son; unm., unmarried.

The name "Graham" was originally "Graeme". Many members of the family still spell the name "Graeme," and some write it "Grahame." Except in a very few cases, we make no attempt to include any but "Grahams" in this volume.

As to the meaning of the name, the following is quoted from reference 121, which is believed to be the most complete and reliable of the various accounts that are given:

(A) INTRODUCTION.

"GRAHAM, GRAEME: From the Anglo-Saxon, Grim; Dutch, Grimm; German, Grimm; Welsh, Grem, Gaelic, Grauin; Meaning "surley, sullen, dark, having a fierce and stern look, courageous."

It is believed that all the Grahams, Graemes and Grahames, excepting those who (or whose ancestors) have adopted the name, are related, though opinions differ on this point. See Chapter (L) for an estimate of the number of Grahams and descendants in the United States.

The Graham family is among the "best families." It is a very ancient family. Its members have distinguished themselves in the affairs of the various countries where they have lived.

All who claim the name and blood of GRAHAM have just cause to be proud.

(B) THE GRAHAM COAT OF ARMS.

Sir Bernard Burke, of Herald's College, London, said "Heraldry is prized by all who can show honorable ancestry, or who wish to found honorable families."

While Coats of Arms are not recognized by law in the United States, more American families than ever before are adopting Coats of Arms used by their forebears in Europe and are using them on their stationery and displaying them on the walls of their homes, etc.

The Graham Coat of Arms shown on the cover of this volume was first used by the family of SIR RICHARD GRAHAM (See *C144, page 7), Member of Parliament, who was created a Baronet, March 29, 1629. Several branches of the Graham family have used this Coat of Arms, or other Arms similar to it.

This Arms is described in Reference 5 (BURKE'S LAND-ED GENTRY) and in numerous other reliable works on Heraldry, as follows; and accompanied sometimes by drawings, Arms: Quarterly, 1st and 4th or (gold); on a chief sable (black), 5 escallops of the field; 2nd and 3rd or (gold), a fess chequy argent (silver) and azure (blue); in chief a chevron gules (red).

Crest: Two wings or (gold).

Motto: Reason contents me.

Besides its family significance, the Graham Coat of Arms, especially when produced in full bright colors, makes an excellent mural decoration and inspires the admiration and comment of all who see it.

As an emblem of family pride as well as a work of art, we believe that every Graham should have a copy of the Graham Arms on the wall of his (or her) home or office. Many prominent members of the Graham family in America have asked us to produce copies for them.

(D) PROMINENT BRITISH GRAHAMS, FIRST GENERATIONS.

See Reference 40.

CLEMENTIA STERLING GRAHAM (1782-1887), of Duntrune; authoress of "Mystifications." She was the daughter of Patrick Sterling and Amelia Graham, of Forfarshire. Patrick Sterling and his wife assumed the name Graham when the wife succeeded to the family estates. Clementia Graham "practised over a long life of over ninety-five years a wise charity, not only in giving alms, but also by kind acts and words. She translated some works from the French into English.

DOUGAL GRAHAM (1724-79): chapbook writer and bellman; born near Stirling. Followed Prince Charles Edward with his army, 1745. Published "A Full, Particular and True Account of the Rebellion in the Year 1745-46." Composed a song, set to the music of "The Gallant Grahams." Was a printer in Glasgow. Wrote several books.

SIR FORTESCUE GRAHAM (1794-1880). General, Colonel royal marine artillery 1866-70; s. of Col. Richard G. (a descendant of the Grahams of Flatten, co. Meath. Served in the British Army during the War of 1812, at Lake Champlain, Fort Point Peter, and at St. Mary's, Ga. Served also in China. Married Caroline Belliser.

GEORGE GRAHAM (1675-1751), mechanician; b. Kirkclinton Parish, Cumberland, Eng.; invented the exceedingly ingenious mercurial pendulum for clocks, and other devices; made the great mural quadrant at Greenwich Observatory; supplied the French Academy with the apparatus used for the measurement of a degree of the meridian; Fellow of the Royal Society; buried in Westminster Abbey.

GEORGE GRAHAM (d. 1767), dramatist; entered King's College, Cambridge, 1743, where he was elected a fellow; was ordained and became assistant master of the school; author of "Telemachus," a play, a portion of which was set to music.

GEORGE FARQUHAR GRAHAM (1789-1867), musician; eldest son of Lieut.-Col. Humphrey Graham; b. Edinburgh. In 1815 he was chosen secretary of one of the first Edinburgh musical festivals, to the success of which he materially contributed; studied in France and Italy; was a noted violinist, being favorably known among his contemporaries. "It is as a writer on musical subjects that Graham deserves to be remembered, his work in this direction being of considerable value." Contributed an article on "Music" to the seventh edition of THE ENCYCLOPEDIA BRITANNICA, and an article on "Organ" for the eighth edition.

JAMES GRAHAM, fifth Earl and first Marquis of Montrose (1612-50); s. of John, 4th Earl; went to study in Glasgow, 1624; admitted to the Univ. of St. Andrews, 1627; travelled much on the continent. "Sought to interview Charles I. He was young, high spirited and burning for distinction. Charles, it is said, trusted him coldly. ... In the first troubles in Scotland Montrose took no part; but before the end of 1637 he was induced by nothes to join the national movement. That it was a national movement as well as a religious one was probably its principal charm to Montrose. ... He was soon in the forefront of the agitation in defence of the national covenant, which was signed in Feb. and Mar., 1638." He was placed in command of a force sent to the north to quell the separatist tendencies of Aberdeen, occupying Aberdeen several different times. Was a member of the Parliament which met in Edinburgh Aug., 1639, which declared for the abolition of the episcopacy. "Montrose's first difficulty was with the King (Charles). Charles played his game so badly that Montrose drew back for a time among the covenanters, and on Aug. 20, 1640, when the Scots invaded England, he was the first to cross the Tweed. ... On June 11 Montrose was imprisoned in Edinburgh Castle. During the King's visit to Scotland Montrose wrote him accusing Hamilton of treason. ... Montrose visited the queen at York (1643) urging her to countenance a royalist insurrection in the north of Scotland, to be supported by troops to be sent over by the Marquis of Antrim from Ireland. ... Montrose's military genius was of a very high order. His skill in manœuvring his little force is beyond dispute. ... If he failed it was because his statesmanship was inferior to his military genius. In 1649 Montrose offered his services to the Prince of Wales, who was then at Brussels. ... in conference with some ministers on May 20, Montrose laid down his political profession of faith. "The Covenant which I took, I own it and adhere to it. Bishops I care not for them. I never intended to advance their interests. But when the king has granted you all your desires, and you were every one sitting under his vine and under his fig-tree, that then you should have taken a party in England by the hand, and entered into a league and covenant with them against the king, was the thing I judged my duty to oppose to the yondmost." On May 21, 1650, Montrose, dressed "in his red scarlet cassock," was hanged in the Grassmarket. The indignation of the Scots against Montrose was chiefly roused by the slaughter of their countrymen by his followers. He said in defence that no one was killed except in battle. This was not strictly true, as there was much slaughter after the capture of Aberdeen, by the soldiers, though Montrose claimed that he was unable to restrain his "unpaid" soldiers. Montrose was a poet as well as a warrior and statesman. His poems have a political purpose and had a vigor which would have given them life apart from the intention with which they were written.

JAMES GRAHAM, second Marquis of Montrose (1631?-69); surnamed the "Good" Marquis. In 1645 he was seized by General Urrie at Montrose where he was attending school under a tutor. Both he and the tutor were for a time imprisoned in the Castle in Edinburgh. On the execution of his father, 1650, the estates were forfeited. After the defeat of the attempt of Charles II in 1652, Montrose came to London, but being disappointed in his reception by Cromwell, took his departure for Scotland, where his estates were restored to him. In the following year he took part in the risings in the highlands under the earl of Glencairn. He was "appointed an extraordinary lord of session, June 25, 1668.

JAMES GRAHAM (1649-1730), colonel; b. Norton Conyers, Yorkshire; second s. of Sir George G., Bart., of Netherby Cumberland. He received from Louis XIV, 1671, a commission as captain of the regiment of Scottish infantry of Douglas; in 1673 he was appointed by Charles II to the captaincy of a company of foot. Later he was captain of twelve companies. Married "the beautiful Dorothy Howard, one of the maids of honor to the queen." "His attractive person and manner made him a great favorite with the court." In Dec., 1679 he was keeper of the privy purse to the Duchess of York, and soon after was acting in the same capacity to the Duke of York, with apartments in St James Palace. He purchased the estates of Allan Bellingham, 1687, in Westmoreland. He had the special confidence of James II, whom he accompanied to Rochester, Dec. 18, 1688, and whom he assisted with money. He secured a royal plate in the "privy lodgings," and looked after James shares in the East India and Guiana Companies. He contrived to win the good graces of William III. He was later accused of treason but was pardoned. He commenced an agitation in Scotland, where his influence was considerable. The freedom of Edinburgh had been presented to him in 1679, and that of Stirling and Linlithgow in 1681. He visited Edinburgh for the purpose of conferring with several well-known Jacobites, 1691-2, later going to France on military missions. A careful watch had been set on his movements and narrowly escaped being captured by two messengers at his residence in London, when in the act of superintending the removal of money and plate for transmission to James. A proclamation for his arrest was issued, he surrendered to the Secretary of State. He was admitted to bail, but was again arrested on the discovery of the famous "Assassination plot and sent to the Fleet but was soon released. His hospitality was unbounded and he was "one of the most popular men of the country, though he always maintained a correspondence with his Jacobite friends. He took oaths to the government in 1701 and, in 1702, was elected Member of Parliament for Appleby, Westmoreland, which he continued to represent until 1705. Sons: Henry, William, Richard. His portrait, by Sir Peter Lely, hangs in the library at Levens.

JAMES GRAHAM, fourth Marquis and first Duke of Montrose (d. 1742); was placed under the care of ten tutors at the time of his father's death; was handsome, possessing "a sweetness of disposition which charmed all who knew him." "Improved himself at foreign courts. In 1702 he added very greatly to his territorial influence by his purchase of the property of the Duke of Lennox, with many of its jurisdictions, including the hereditary sheriffdom of Dumbarton, the custodianship of Dumbarton Castle and the jurisdiction of the regality of Lennox. In 1705 he was appointed high admiral of Scotland and in 1706 president of the council. "By his good behavior" in the first sessions of his parliament he awakened the hopes of the Cavalier party that he would be a worthy representative of the royal, noble and worthy "family of Montrose." He was a steady supporter of the Protestant succession. For his services in connection with the union, he was created Duke of Montrose, 1707. He was one of the 16 Scots representative peers elected by the last Scottish Parliament Fe. 13, 1707 and was several times re-elected. Appointed keeper of the privy seal of Scotland, 1709. On the death of Queen Anne, he was named by George I as one of the lords of the regency; later named a secretary of state but later dismissed on account of suspected Jacobite sentiments. His support of the government in subduing the rebellion in Scotland, 1715, was of considerable importance. He was one of six noblemen who in 1735 presented a petition complaining of the undue interference of the government in the election of Scotch representative peers.

JAMES GRAHAM (1676-1746), dean of the faculty of advocates; judge of the Scotch court of admiralty, 1739; founder of the family of Graham of Airth Castle, Stirlingshire. Had 2 sons and 2 daughters.

JAMES GRAHAM (1745-1794), doctor; studied medicine in the University of Edinburgh; travelled in America and practised as an oculist and aurist; lived in Philadelphia, 1772-3 and became acquainted with Franklin's discoveries; returned to England, 1774 and, at Bristol, "advertised his wonderful cures;" later went to London and established himself nearly opposite St. James Palace. He declared that his remedies could be taken with advantage only under his own eye. He married Catherine Macauley, who was the first patient whom he treated. He placed his patients on a "magnetic throne," or in a bath into which electric currents could be passed; visited Aix-la-Chapelle, France, 1779, where he received high testimonials from many aristocratic patients. The hall of his office was adorned by crutches, etc., disused by his patients. Other parts of his offices were adorned with sculpture, paintings, stained glass windows. He called one of his rooms "the Great Appollo Apartment," sacred to health. Published many articles and letters.

JAMES GRAHAM, third duke of Montrose (1755-1836); s. of William, second Duke of Montrose; educated at Trinity College, Cambridge; elected M.P. for Richmond in Yorkshire, 1780, and for Wiltshire 1784 and 1790; joined Pitt's administration, as lord of the treasury, 1788 and held that post until 1789; opposed Fox's East India Bill in 1785; was paymaster-general of the forces, 1789-91; vice-president of the board of trade, 1789 and a member of the privy council at the same time; commissioner of the affairs of India; lord justice general of Scotland; chancellor of the univ. of Glasgow; lord lieutenant for counties of Sterling and Dumbarton; knight of the order of the thistle, and knight of the Garter; he obtained for the highlanders permission to resume the national dress, which had long been prohibited by law.

JAMES GRAHAM (1791-1845), army pensioner): one of the recipients of the Norcross annuity to Waterloo soldiers; b. co. Monaghan, Ireland; joined the Coldstream Guards and greatly distinguished himself as a lance sergeant in the battle of Waterloo.

JAMES GRAHAM, fourth duke and seventh Marquis of Montrose (1799-1874): educated at Trinity College, Cambridge; represented Cambridge in Parliament, 1825-32 and opposed the Reform Bill; privy councillor; commissioner to the India Board. He was a tory of the old school and opposed the free-trade measures of Sir Robert Peel in 1846; lord steward of the queen's household; chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster; postmaster-general; concluded a postal convention with the United States, India and China, which considerably reduced the tariff on letters to those countries; effected improvements in the mail contracts with the east; proposed Electric Telegraph Bills in House of Lords, which placed the telegraphic communication in the hands of the post office department; chancellor of the university of Glasgow; honorary colonel of Stirling, Dumbarton, Clackmannan and Kinross Militia; major general of royal archers; the queen's body guard in Scotland; lord lieut. of Stirlingshire.

JAMES GILLESPIE GRAHAM (1777-1855), architect; b. Dunblane, Perthshire, of poor parents named Gillespie, rose by his own ability from the position of a working joiner to be a leading Gothic architect. On his marriage with Margaret Anne Graeme, daughter and heiress of William Graham of Orchill, Perthshire, he assumed the name of Graham and succeeded to the estate on the death of his father-in-law. He worked on many important structures. In 1856 he competed for the erection of the new Houses of Parliament at Westminster. Fellow of Antiquaries of Scotland.

SIR JAMES ROBERT GEORGE GRAHAM (1792-1861) statesman; was descended from a family long famous in the history of the English border. The baronetcy was first conferred on Richard Graham, grandfather of Richard Graham, Mar. 20, 1629. The family house at Netherby, on the banks of the Esk, was built in the reign of Charles I. James was the s. of Sir James Graham and Lady Catherine Stewart. His mother was a lady of great intelligence and religious feeling, and greatly influenced her son. Travelled in Spain and Sicily; acted as secretary to Lord Montgomerie in connection with diplomatic missions. He was a Whig, while his father was a Tory. Lived at Croft-head, near Netherby, where he greatly improved the estates inherited from his father. He held an important place in the politics of his country. "He was an active magistrate and did good work in reforming the country finance. Was a Member of Parliament and he made a name in the House of Commons in 1830 by a motion for a reduction of the official salaries and his attack on the salaries received by the privy councillors. Introduced a bill for the reform of the exchequer office, When the government showed an inclination to meddle with the revenues of the Irish church, Graham joined Mr. Stanley in resigning office. He was convinced of the need of an established church. On the fall of the Whig ministry Graham was offered office by Sir Robert Peel, but refused. Member of Parliament for Pembroke, 1838; Lord rector of the Univ. of Glasgow. He was a considerable orator; made many speeches in parliament. He won and lost the confidence of his constituency many times, by his views and his speeches.

JANET GRAHAM: (1723-1805); poetess, b. Dumfriesshire. Among other pieces she wrote "The Wayward Wife," which was popular; died at age 82.

SIR JOHN GRAHAM (d. 1298) warrior; second s. of Sir David Graham. Joined Sir William Wallace at an early age and assisted him so manfully that he was said to be "next to Wallace the most valliant of Scots. In an engagement near Queensbury, where Wallace, with a few of his followers were hard pressed, Graham came to the rescue, slaying the English Captain and putting the English to flight. He was slain at the battle of Falkirk, July 22, 1298. His death was grievously lamented by Wallace, who is reported to have wept over the body when found upon the field of battle.

JOHN GRAHAM, third Earl of Montrose (1547?-1608): lord high chancellor and afterwards viceroy of Scotland. Often sat in parliament as his father's proxy while still young. Was in the battle of Langside; in charge of the Castle of Glasgow. In 1603 he was appointed viceroy and high commissioner in Scotland for his majesty for life.

JOHN GRAHAM, of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee (1649?-1689): was descended from a younger branch of the Grahams of Kincardine, ancestors of the Montrose family. The link of connection between the Claverhouse and Montrose branches was Sir Robert Graham of Strathcarron, son of Sir William Graham of Kincardine, by Princess Mary Stewart, dau. of Robert III. John Graham and his brother David were admitted Burgesses of Dundee, on their father's privilege, 1660. Educated at the University of St. Andrews; was a master of the epistolary way of writing, for he not only expressed himself with great ease and fluency, but argued well and had a great art in giving his thoughts in few words. Served with William of Orange and was at the battle of Senef. He is reported to have saved the life of the prince by mounting him on his own horse at a critical moment, for which he was promoted captain. Was in the service of the Dutch for a time. Was captain of a regiment sent to curb the covenanters, with whom he had a personal and hereditary feud. "In his crusade he was sincerely in earnest. He possessed nothing of the joviality and careless love of pleasure associated with the typical cavalier. He was reputed to be truly pious and even the covenanters themselves admitted that the "Hell-wicked-witted blood thirsty Graham of Claverhouse ... hated to spend his time with wine and women. In 1680 he received a grant of forfeited lands of Macdougall of Ireuch in Galloway. His life was very eventful, 16 pages in above reference being devoted to him.

JOHN GRAHAM (1720-1775), history-painter, b. England; went to Holland at an early age, settled at the Hague where he studied painting under Pieter Terwesten and Arnold Houbraken. His name appears on the lists of the guild of St. Luke at the Hague from 1718 to 1742. He also visited Rome to study art there, later visiting Paris and London.

JOHN (1754-1817), painter; b. Edinburgh; pursued his art in London, and studied in the schools of the Royal Academy; contributed to the exhibitions of the Royal Academy from 1780 to 1797, and executed two subjects for Boydell's "Shakespeare Gallery." In 1798 he was appointed by the board of trustees for manufacturers in Scotland, on the recommendation of Sir. William Forbes, their teacher for the higher branches of design, an academy for his work being opened in 1799. "His works are correct, in good taste, and broadly handled, and they evince considerable power. Had as pupils several who afterwards became noted artists. Several of his paintings were famous, among them being "David Instructing Solomon," "Disobedient Prophet," "Escape of Queen Mary from Lochleven," etc.

JOHN GRAHAM (1805-1880), botanist, native of Dumfriesshire; went to India, 1826. Shortly after his arrival in that country he was appointed by his patron (Sir John Malcolm), Deputy Postmaster General of the Bombay Presidency, which post he held until his death. He was also made superintendent of the botanic garden at Bombay soon after its establishment and occupied himself with enriching it with exotic and indigenous plants, the latter mostly of his own collecting. At the time of his death he was engaged in printing a catalogue of Bombay plants and it was finished by a friend. Died in India.

JOHN GRAHAM (1776-1844), historian, b. co Kermanagh, Ireland; was grand son of Lieut. James G., and great-grand son of James G., of Mullinahinch, who was a cornet in the defence of Enniskillen in 1698. The family was transplanted to Ulster from Cumberland in the early part of the seventeenth century. He graduated B.A., 1798 and M.A. in 1815 at Trinity Coll. Dublin, was ordained in the established church of Ireland. He witnessed the celebration of the centenary of the siege of Londonderry in 1788 and was brought up in admiration of its heroes. Published "Annals of Ireland, Ecclesiastical, Civil and Military," an account compiled from numerous authorities of the wars of Ireland, which began in October 1641. Published a history of the siege of Londonderry and defense of Enniskillen in 1688, with historical poetry and biographical notes. Published several other historical works. He often took part in the Orange celebrations, but always expressed good feeling toward the Roman Catholics. Sir Walter Scott wrote to him and is said to have admired his ballads.

JOHN GRAHAM (1794-1865), Bishop of Chester, s. of John G.; b. at Durham; attained high proficiency when in school at Christ's College, Cambridge; elected a fellow and tutor of his college, 1816; chosen master of Christ's college, 1830; collated to the prebend of Sanctae Crucis in Lincoln Cathedral, 1828; served twice as vice-chancellor of the univ.; ordained, 1818 and became rector of Willingham in Cambridgeshire, 1843; nominated chaplain to Prince Albert, 1841; bishop of Chester, 1848. His consecration took place in the Chapel Royal, Whitehall, 1848. On the occasion of his leaving Cambridge the mayor and council of the town tendered him an address of congratulation on his appointment, the only instance in which a tribute of the kind had ever been offered by that body. The bishop was a liberal in politics, but seldom spoke or voted in the House of Lords. His manner of life was simple. He was a lover of ease but could be firm when occasion required. He was appointed clerk of the closet of the queen which appointment he held until his death. He enjoyed the friendship of the prince consort and the respect of the queen. Author of several articles and sermons.

JOHN MURRAY GRAHAM (1809-1881), historian, His father, Andrew, was at one time sheriff of Aberdeenshire. John was

b. in Aberdeenshire and educated at Edinburgh University, where he grad., M.A., 1813. He became an advocate in 1831. Graham was a near kinsman of Thomas Graham, Lord Lynedoch, to a part of whose estates he succeeded in 1859 and whose name he adopted. He wrote "A Month's Tour in Spain in the Spring of 1867," and other items.

PATRICK GRAHAM (d. 1478), archbishop of St. Andrews, s. of Sir William of Kincardine, sometimes called Lord Graham of Dundresmore, by Mary, countess of Angus, a dau. of Robert III. Her first husband was George Douglas, first earl of Angus. Patrick Graham was educated at St. Andrews Univ., where he was dean of the faculty of arts, 1457. His royal descent and connections through his mother's marriage with the powerful family of Angus and with the good Bishop Kennedy, his uterine brother, pointed to the service of the church as the road to high preferment, and in 1463 he was consecrated Bishop of Brechin. Later he went to Rome to avoid the enmity of the Boyds, then at the height of their power in the Scottish court, and to procure his confirmation by the pope. Charges were brought against him by the Catholic church because of his heresy. "The remainder of his life was spent in prison, first in Inchcolm, then for fear of his release by the English fleet in Dunfermline, and finally in the castle of Lochleven where he d. 1478. He was buried in the Chapel on the island of St. Serf. The bull deposing him says that Huscman sent a full notarial report of the inquiry into the charges against him to Rome. The publication of the Vatican records may further elucidate his singular fate."

RICHARD GRAHAM, Viscount Preston (1648-1695), b. at Netherby Cumberland, s. of Sir George Graham, bart (d. 1657). His mother was Lady Mary Johnston, second dau. of James, first earl of Hartfell in Scotland. Educated at Westminster school. Created a baronet of England, 1662; created M.A., 1666; Member of Parliament 1678-9, 1679, and 1680-81. Though a Protestant, he zealously advocated the right of James, Duke of York to the succession. On Dec. 10, 1679 he entertained the duke and duchess when on their way to Scotland, at his Yorkshire seat. Supported by other high Tories he moved in the commons on behalf of the duke against the exclusion bill, Nov. 2, 1680. His exertions were rewarded by his being created a peer of Scotland by the title of Viscount Preston in the County of Haddington, and Baron Graham of Esk. The patent, which is dated at Windsor Castle on May 12, 1681, recited that Charles I in 1635 had given the warrant to Sir Richard Graham, the patentee's grandfather, and that it had afterwards been burnt by the rebels. In July 1681 Preston was in attendance on the Duke of York at Edinburgh; on Aug. 1 he took his place in the Scotch Parliament; became envoy extraordinary to the court of France, 1682. His instructions included many relating to Orange and Luxembourg and to the proposal to Charles II to be the mediator of a peace between France and Spain, and relating to French excesses in the Netherlands. He gave notice that a plot for a descent upon Ireland was being concocted in France against Charles, and he employed spies to collect information on the subject. He presented a strongly worded memorial to the French King "touching his sieging upon the city of Orange. In 1683 he "was ordered to endeavor to trace out Bomeny, the valet of the earl of Essex, who was suspected of being privy to the nobleman's death in the tower. For his attention to the privileges in France of the Scotch people he gained the thanks of the Scotch boroughs." Returned to England and was elected M.P. for Cumberland, 1685. He hoped to have been raised to the English peerage as Baron Liddell of Cumberland, but was disappointed because of his adherence to his religion. He was intrusted by James with the management of the House of Commons which met on May 19 and five days later became chancellor to the queen-dowager. Made lord-lieutenant for Cumberland and Westmoreland, 1687. Chosen lord-president of the council, 1688. was one of a council of five appointed by the king to represent him in London during his absence at Salisbury, 1688. "He vainly endeavored to impress on James the necessity of moderation. After the Revolution, Preston, who was in high favour with Louis XIV, was entrusted by the French Government with considerable sums of money for political purposes. In 1689 he was reported to be in the North of England concerting measures for the restoration of the king. In May he was arrested, brought up to London, committed to the Tower, and not admitted to bail until Oct. 25." He was released after making apologies, but was later recommitted to the Tower and was indicted in Old Bailey on charges of high treason. He pleaded that as a peer of England he was not within the jurisdiction of the court, but his plea was overruled and he was found guilty and condemned to death. His estate and title of baronet were forfeited to the crown. His wife petitioned the queen for his life and received an intimation that he could be saved by making a full discovery of the plot with which he was connected. During some time he regularly wrote a confession every forenoon and burned it every night after he had eaten. At last he confessed his guilt and named his accomplices, among them being William Penn. He added a long list of persons against whom he could not raise up give evidence, but who, if he could trust to Penn's assurances, were friendly to him. James. After several respites he was released, and spent most of the remainder of his life revising for the prison a treatise, with notes, of Boethius's "De Consolatione Philosophiae."

RICHARD GRAHAM (1660-1730). author, compiler of "A Short Account of the most eminent painters, both Ancient and Modern," Published, 1699, "Poems upon the death of the Most Honorable the Marchioness of Winchester." Contributed a paper to the "Philosophical Transactions, (1734)"

SIR ROBERT GRAHAM (d. 1437), conspirator, was the uncle of Malise Graham, earl-palatine of Strathern, who had been deprived by James I. This indignity embittered Graham against the king, and in the parliament of 1435 he expressed his resentment in such language as led to his arrest and banishment. He quitted the court determined on revenge, and came to be the most prominent actor in the conspiracy by which James's life was lost. Many authorities, however, agree that the real originator of the plot was Walter, earl of Atholl, the king's uncle, who aspired to the crown in respect to the supposed superior legitimacy of the second family of Robert II. "Graham, with a band of 300 highlanders, burst into the king's chamber, and James, who had taken refuge in a vault under the floor, was discovered, dragged out, and killed, though the queen escaped. For this Graham was captured and put to death. "Undaunted to the end, he endured the torments inflicted on him with fortitude, justifying his conduct on the ground that he had first renounced his allegiance to James.

ROBERT CUNNINGHAME-GRAHAM (d. 1797), song-writer, s. of Nicol or Nicolas Graham, of Pethshire and Stirlingshire. Educated at Glasgow Univ. In early life he was a planter in Jamaica, and for some time held an office as received-general of that island. Rector of Glasgow Univ., in opposition to Burke, 1785. Represented Stirlingshire in Parliament, 1794 to 1796. He was a mover of the Bill of Rights, which to some extent foreshadowed the Reform Bill of 1832. He was an earnest advocate of the principles of the French Revolution. Wrote various lyrical pieces, including "If doughty deeds my lady please." Sons: William, his heir; Nicol, marechal-de-camp in the Austrian service; 2 daughters.

SIR ROBERT GRAHAM (1744-1836), judge, s. of James G.; educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, elected a fellow, grad., B.A., 1766; M.A., 1769, LL.D., 1835. Appointed attorney general to the Prince of Wales, 1793; king's counsel, 1795; appointed baron of the exchequer, 1799; knighted, 1800.

ROBERT GRAHAM (1786-1845), M.D. and botanist, s. of Dr. Robert G.; studied medicine at Edinburgh and Glasgow Univs. In 1818, on the creation of a separate chair for botany, Graham was appointed the first professor. In 1820 he obtained the regius professorship of botany in Edinburgh Univ., and also became a physician to the infirmary. Wrote on botanical and medical subjects.

THOMAS GRAHAM, Lord Lynedoch (1748-1843), of Balgowan, Perthshire, general; s. of Thomas Craeme. Like other young Scotchmen of station he was brought up at home under private tutors, later attending Christ Church Coll., Oxford. Joined Lord Hood's fleet at Gibraltar and acted as aid-de-camp to Lord Mulgrave in the operations on the shore of Toulon, 1793. Later raised a battalion called the "Perthshire Volunteers." Commissioned Lieut.-Colonel, 1794; brevet-colonel, 1795; served with his troops at Gibraltar; appointed British Military Commissioner with the Austrian army in Italy, 1796, and was shut up in Mantua during the investment of that place by the French. He distinguished himself at the capture of Minorca, 1798; despatched to organize the defenses of Mesina, 1799, the strategic importance of which place had been strongly insisted upon by Admiral Nelson. Sent to Malta with troops, 1799, as Brigadier-General. "Graham resolved on starving out the place as the most humane method of reducing it." The siege was maintained for two years when the place capitulated. Travelled in Turkey; was in Paris after the peace of Amiens, and with his regiment in Ireland, 1804-5, then going to the West Indies. He made a speech in 1806, in favor of limited services as a preventative of desertion. He accompanied Moore as aide-de-camp to Sweden in 1808, and afterwards to Spain. He was in the Corunna retreat, and was one of the few actually present at Moore's death and burial. Sent to Portugal, 1810, to assume command of the British troops aiding in the defense of that place against the French. Attacked the rear of the French blockading army, 1811, and won a memorable victory; refused a Spanish dukedom. Joined the Duke of Wellington, 1811. "His seniority as a Lieutenant-general placed him next to Wellington, who appears to have been glad to get him; assisted in the siege and capture of Ciudad Rodrigo. Participated in Wellington's advance against the forts of Salamanca. was placed in command of the left wing of Wellington's Army, consisting of 40,000 men, which he commanded at the great battle of Vittoria, 1813; captured Tolosa, where he was wounded; despatched by Wellington to invest the fortress of St. Sebastian, which fort he soon captured; cooperated with Bulow's troops against Antwerp; defeated the enemy at Merxem. In 1814 he received the thanks of parliament for his military services and was created Baron Lynedoch of Balgowan in the peerage of the United Kingdom, but he refused the pension of 2,000 pounds a year offered with the title. Became a full general, 1821; succeeded Lord Harris as governor of Dumbarton Castle, 1829. Started the project of a general military club, 1815, "to afford officers a respectable meeting place in London, without resort to taverns." Visited St Petersburg, Moscow, etc.

THOMAS GRAHAM (1805-1869), chemist, b. Glasgow. He was the son of a merchant and manufacturer, the eldest of a family of seven. Entered English preparatory school at Glasgow, 1811. Entered Glasgow Univ., 1819, graduated, M.A., 1824. Declined to become a minister, as his father desired, choosing to devote himself to science. Spent ten years in Univ. of Edinburgh, where he received £10 for his first literary work, spending the money for presents for his mother and sisters. His correspondence with his mother shows their mutual devotion. Taught chemistry; in 1829 he became a lecturer on chemistry at the Mechanics' Institution; later taught chemistry at Andersonian Univ., and engaged in original research; later was professor of chemistry at University College, London, where he held the chair with great distinction until 1855, when the government appointed him master of the mint.. Acted as non-resident assayer for many years. Was examiner in chemistry in the Univ. of London for ten years; member of a commission appointed to report to the House of Commons on the ventilation of the new houses of Parliament, 1846; appointed by the board of ordnance to inquire into the various methods of casting guns, 1847; appointed by the government to report on the purity of the water supplied by the various companies to the metropolis. In 1834 he received from the Royal Society of Edinburgh their Keith prize for his discovery of the law of the diffusion of gasses. Elected the first president of the Chemical Society on its establishment, 1840; was awarded a gold medal by the Royal Society. Was the first president of the Cavendish Society, 1846, established for the translation and publication of valuable works and papers on chemistry. Elected a fellow of the Royal Society, 1836, afterwards on the council for six years, and twice vice-president, was to have been offered the presidency but indicated he would not accept. Presided over the chemical section of the British Association at the Birmingham meeting of 1839, and made D.C.L. of Oxford, 1853. Corresponding member of the Institute of France, and honorary member of the Academy of Sciences of Berlin, Munich, Turin, Washington, etc. Published the well known book, "Elements of Chemistry," 1842, of which later editions appeared in America and Germany. "As a chemist Graham held ideas far in advance of his contemporaries. Before 1840 he had discovered and proved the polybasic character of phosphoric acid, proving that this acid forms several distinct compounds with water. He laid down the bold theory that all the so-called elements may be only forms of one primordial element. Among his minor chemical researches were his experiments showing that the slow oxidation of phosphorus by air is arrested by the presence of even mere traces of olefiant gas, and that the spontaneous inflammability of phosphuretted hydrogen is due to the presence of a small proportion of nitrous acid. Discovered the law of the diffusion of gases. A bronze statue of Graham was placed in George Square, Glasgow, 1872.

WILLIAM GRAHAM, seventh earl of Monteth, and first earl of Airth (1591-1661), s. of John Graham; married Lady Agnes, dau. of Patrick, Lord Grey. The family was of the same stock as the earls of Montrose. William Graham was a man of great vigor. He cleared many of his estates from incumbrances, and became an early favorite of Charles I. In 1620 he was appointed a member of the privy council of Scotland and a commissioner of the Exchequer. was made president of the council for life, 1631. Created justice-general of Scotland, 1628. The king consulted with him in everything relating to Scottish affairs, and obliged Graham frequently to travel up to his court in London and made him a member of the privy council of England. The king gave him an annual pension of 500 pounds. "Something like a genealogical craze took possession of the Scottish nobility at this period. Graham shared in the rivalry and traced his ancestry to Rufiana, countess palatine of Strathcarn, and granddaughter of Robert II. Created earl of Strathearn, 1631, at which time the king ratified in Graham's favor the old charters which had been granted to Graham's ancestor, David, earl of Strathcarn. Graham had enemies who later spread the report that he had "boasted of his blood and thought his right to the crown as good as the king's. The queen was induced to speak to Charles, who was intending to go to Scotland for his coronation and settle the matter when there. The outcome was that he was deprived of some of his estates and titles, but he afterwards again gained favor with Charles. He took part in the defeat of the covenanters at Rappraur. The earldom of Airth was inherited by his grandson, William, who ultimately (having no heirs) made over the estates to the earl of Montrose.

WILLIAM GRAHAM (1757-1801), minister of the United Secession Church, b. Linlithgowshire, where his father was steward to the earl of Rothes. He was a writer to the signet at Edinburgh. When eighteen years of age he was appointed to take charge of the philosophical class in

(F) AMERICAN GRAHAM FAMILIES.

While a vast amount of Genealogical material on the British Graham families is available, a small part of which is included in this volume, it is apparent that no attempt has ever been made to publish a complete Genealogy of the Graham families of America.

Since many Graham families established themselves in the United States (Colonies) long before the American Revolution, and since they and their descendants have played an important role in public affairs, there is considerable data available for a complete "GRAHAM GENEALOGY." However, much of this material is "disconnected," including data in the vital statistics of the original colonies, etc. To gather all this data and publish it in a single volume, or in a set of volumes, would cost several thousand dollars. However, a complete "GRAHAM GENEALOGY" may be published by the American Historical-Genealogical Society, with the cooperation of members of the Graham Family, at some time in the future. See Chapter (O).

CHARLES MINNAIRD GRAHAM, civil engineer, b. New York City, 3 June, 1824; d. there 12 Dec 11, 1899. He was entered in the U.S. Navy as midshipman in 1841 and served in the Gulf during the war with Mexico. Devoted himself for several years to the study of engineering. About 1857 he was appointed consulting engineer of the Brooklyn navy yard, the dry-dock and landing-ways being built under his supervision. At the beginning of the Civil War he volunteered in the National Army, about 400 men in his employ in the navy yard following his example. The Excelsior Brigade was organized, in which Graham subsequently became major and colonel. Throughout the early part of the contest he was actively engaged in the Army of the Potomac. In 1862 he was commissioned Brigadier-general and fought at the Battle of Gettysburg, where he was severely wounded. He was afterward assigned to the command of a gun boat flotilla on the James River under General Butler, and was the first to carry the National colors up that river. He afterwards took part in the attack on Ft. Fisher, and remained on duty at different points until the close of the war, when he returned to the practice of engineering in New York City. He was breveted major-general of volunteers, 15 March 1865. Among the enterprises with which he has since been connected are the Broadway Pavement Commission and the Beach Pneumatic Transit Co. Gen. Graham was Chief engineer of the dock department from 1873 till 1875, and surveyor of the port of New York from 1878 till 1883, when he became naval officer and held that post until 1885.

DAVID GRAHAM, lawyer, b. London, England 8 Feb., 1808; d. in Nice, France, 27 May, 1852. At the time of his birth, Mr. Graham's father, an Irishman, was leaving G. Britain for political reasons. The son was educated partly at Columbia and partly under the supervision of his father, who was said to be one of the best scholars in the country. Young Graham studied law and was admitted to the bar. During 1842 he served as corporation counsel. He was subsequently appointed, in conjunction with Arphaxad Loomis and David D. Field "to revise, reform, simplify and abridge the rules of practice, pleadings, forms and proceedings of the courts of record" of the State of N.Y., under the constitution adopted 3 Nov. 1846. This was the forerunner of the present system of practice and occupied Mr. Graham and his associates several years. Meantime he was successful as a lawyer, especially in criminal cases. In the trial of Benjamin Bishop T. Onderdonk before the House of Bishops in 1844, Mr. Graham, as counsel for the defendant, added greatly to his reputation. On the opening of New York University in the spring of 1838, he was appointed professor of the law of pleading and practice. Mr. Graham is the author of "Practice of the Supreme Court in the State of New York" (New York, 1832). It passed through a second edition (1836), and he had finished revising the first volume of a third (1847) at the time of his death. He also published "New Trials" (1834); new ed. greatly enlarged by D. Graham, Jr. and Thomas W. Watterman, 5 vols., 1856), and "Courts of Law and Equity in the State of New York" (New York, 1839). He issued an annotated edition of Smith's "Chancery Practice," which was published as the second American edition of that work in 1842.

GEORGE GRAHAM, soldier, b. Chester Co., Pa., 1758. d. near Charlotte, N.C., 29 March, 1826. His mother was left a widow with six children, and but slender means. The son emigrated to N.C. and was educated at the Queen's museum, Charlotte. When only seventeen, with a few others, he rode all night to reach Salisbury, and there seized two tory lawyers, Dunn and Booth, and carried them to Camden, S.C., where they were imprisoned, but subsequently sent for safe-keeping to Charleston as persons "inimical to the country." He served throughout the Revolutionary War, and on 3 Oct., 1780, was one of twelve who attacked and drove back a superior British force seven miles to the south of Charlotte. He was also active when the enemy was in camp near his residence, in attacking their forage parties. After the declaration of peace he served several terms in the legislature, was for a long time clerk of the court of Mecklenburg county, became major-general of militia, and filled other responsible offices. His two sons, James and William A., follow: (See his brother Joseph on following page).

- (1) James: lawyer, b. Lincoln Co., N.C., Jan., 1793; d. Rutherford Co., N.C., Sept., 1851; was grad. at the Univ. of N.C., 1814; studied law, was admitted to the bar and practised successfully in his native county for many years. Served several terms in the legislature, 1822-29, and was elected to Congress as a Whig, serving most of the time from 1833 to 1843. Also elected to the 29th Congress, serving from Dec. 1845 to March 1847, when he retired and devoted the remainder of his life to farming.
- (2) William Alexander: senator; b. Lincoln Co., N.C. 5 Sept., 1804; d. Saratoga Springs, N.Y., 11 Aug., 1875; was grad. at the Univ. of N.C., and began the practise of law in Hillsborough. He was several times elected to the State Legislature between 1833 and 1840, and was more than once chosen speaker. In 1840, he was elected to the U.S. Senate to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Robert Strange, serving from 1840 to 1843. In 1844 he was elected Governor by the Whigs on a larger vote than was ever before polled. He was re-elected in 1846 by an increased majority, but declined a third term and retired to private life. He was offered the Spanish mission by President Taylor in 1849, but declined it, and in 1850 became secretary of the Navy in Fillmore's cabinet, but resigned in 1852 in consequence of having been nominated by the Whigs for Vice-President on the ticket with General Scott. ring his term of office as secretary he projected and carried out the important expedition to Japan under Commodore Perry. Governor Graham served as senator in the 2nd Confederate Congress. Was a delegate to the Union Convention, Philadelphia, 1866, which was called to sustain the policy of Andrew Johnson. At the time of his death he was acting as one of the commission that had been appointed to settle the boundary dispute between the states of Maryland and Virginia.

GEORGE REX GRAHAM, editor, b. Philadelphia, Pa., 18 Jan. 1813. He was early intended for the bar, but the death of his father compelled him to relinquish this ambition, and he lived with his uncle in Montgomery Co., Pa., where he employed every spare moment in reading. In 1832 he returned to Philadelphia and began to learn the trade of a cabinet maker, meantime devoting six hours daily, after his work was completed, to literary pursuits. A few years later he was enabled to enter a law office, and in 1839 he was admitted to the bar. He had already contributed a series of papers to the Philadelphia press, which met with such favor that he was invited to become the editor of "The Saturday Evening Post", and afterward one of its proprietors. His relations with this journal continued until 1840. He purchased in 1839 a monthly called "Atkinson's Casket," which he published until 1841, when, uniting with it the "Gentlemen's Magazine," he began the publication of "Graham's Magazine." This publication attained a large circulation under his management, and its contributors included William C. Bryant, J. Fenimore Cooper, Henry W. Longfellow, Edgar A. Poe and Bayard Taylor. For many years it was the best periodical of its kind published in the United States. In 1846 he purchased the "North American," and in 1847 the "United States Gazette," which he incorporated with the "North American." Later he engaged in stock operations, losing thereby much of his money, and was compelled to part with "The North American" and the "Magazine." But subsequently he regained control of the "Magazine," and continued its publication until about 1851. He then lived by his pen, but failing health led to his being supported through the liberality of George W. Childs.

GEORGE GRAHAM, acting secretary of war, b. Dumfries, Prince William Co., Va., about 1772; d. Washington, D.C., August, 1830; graduated at Columbia, 1790, studied law and practiced in his native town. He afterwards moved to Fairfax Co. and raised and commanded the "Fairfax light-horse," during the war of 1812. On the retirement of General Armstrong from the war department, after the burning of Washington, Graham was placed in charge as chief clerk. During the last two years of Adams' administration, and until relieved by John C. Calhoun in the first year of Monroe's term, he was acting secretary of war. In 1818, at Mr. Calhoun's request, he made a long and perilous journey to inspect a settlement which had been made by Gen. Lallemande, Napoleon's chief of artillery, with 600 armed colonists, at Orcoquises Bluffs, on Trinity River. Finding the colonists on Galveston Island, he induced them to submit to the authority of the United States and abandon their enterprise. On his return he became president of the Washington Branch of the U.S. Bank, which office he held until he was appointed commissioner of the land office, 1823, serving in the latter capacity during the remainder of his life. While connected with the bank he was employed by the government to wind up the "Indian factorage" affairs, and in doing so is said to have saved the country not less than $250,000. HENRY HALE GRAHAM, jurist, b. London, England, 1 Jul., 1731; d. Philadelphia, Pa., 24 Jan. 1790. He came to this country with his father, William, 1733, and settled in Chester Co., Pa. He became a lawyer and was a man of large influence in the colony. He held the office of register, recorder and prothonotary and clerk in several courts in Chester Co., and from 1761 till 1790 was one of the judges of the courts of the county. During the latter year Delaware Co. was created, and he was commissioned president judge of its court of common pleas. In 1790 he was chosen a delegate to the constitutional convention of the state, and died during the sitting of the convention, which body, out of respect to his memory, adjourned, and sent three of their members to Chester to attend his funeral.

ISABELLA GRAHAM, philanthropist, b. Lanarkshire, Scotland, 29 July 1744; d. New York City, 27 July, 1814. She was the daughter of John Marshall, who educated her carefully. In 1765 she married Dr. John Graham, of Paisley, and accompanied him with his regiment to Canada, where she spent four years. Her husband was then ordered to the island of Antigua, where he died, 1774. Mrs. Graham returned to Scotland, but in 1789 came to New York City and established a school for young ladies, in which for many years she was eminently successful. Before leaving Scotland she had founded the Penny Society, now known as the society for the destitute, and she continued to labor in the same field in New York. Among the more important of the institutions established by her are the Widow's and Orphans' Asylum societies; the society for the promotion of industry, and the first Sunday school for ignorant adults. She also aided in organizing the first missionary society, and the first monthly missionary prayer-meeting in New York. She was the first president of the Magdalen society, systematically visited the inmates of the hospital and the sick female convicts in the state prison, and distributed Bibles and tracts long before there was a Bible or tract society in New York. Her daughter.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, consul, b. New York City, Jan., 1835; d. Florence, Italy, 30 April 1876. He was partly educated in Amiens, France, where, on account of precocious literary talent, he was selected to deliver a poetical address of welcome to Lamartine when the latter visited the school in 1848. Mr. Graham lived for a time in Rio de Janeiro, and, after returning to New York, was a passenger on the steamer "San Francisco," which foundered in a gale off Cape Hatteras. His experience in this wreck injured his health and hastened his death. In 1856 he married and settled in New York, where he became widely known through his taste for art and literature and his brilliant conversational talents. As a member of the century club, the Geographical Society, and kindred institutions, he made the acquaintance of many artists and authors. He spent the years 1862-3 in Europe, and, after remaining in New York until 1866 again went abroad. Meantime he had been engaged in acquiring whatever curiosities he had found in his travels, until he had large collections of ecins, autographs and books. Some time after his return from Europe Mr. Graham was appointed U.S. Consul General for Italy, and resided in Florence. When the capital was transferred to Rome, he preferred to accept the office of a simple consul rather than change his home.

JOHN GRAHAM, clergyman. b. Edinburg, Scotland, 1694; d. Woodbury, Conn., Dec., 1774. He was a descendant of one of the marquises of Montrose. He was educated in Glasgow and studied medicine. Coming to this country with immigrants from Londonderry, in 1718, he first resided at Exeter, N.H., but afterwards studied theology and was ordained as the first clergyman of Stafford, Conn., 1723. He obtained his dismissal in 1731 on the ground of insufficient support, and in 1735 he was called to the 2nd church of Southbury, then Woodbury, where he spent over forty years. During the great New England revival of 1740 he was especially active. Mr. Graham was the author of "A Ballad Against the Church of England in Connecticut," a "Tract" on the same subject, and "A Rejoinder to Johnson's Answer. Immediately following are his descendants. His oldest son was Andrew.

(1) Andrew: physician, d. 1785, was a patriot in the Revolution, and represented Woodbury, Conn. for many years in the legislature. In the battle of Danbury he acted as regimental surgeon, and in the engagement at White Plains, N.Y., was taken prisoner and was not released until the surrender of Gen. Cornwallis. His son was John Andrew.

(A) John Andrew: advocate, b. Southbury, Conn., 10 June, 1764; d. New York City, 29 Aug., 1841, was admitted to the Connecticut bar in 1785, and at once removed to Rutland, Vt. He subsequently went on an unsuccessful mission to England to obtain the consecration of Bishop Peters from the English Bishops, and on a second visit to Europe in 1796 he received the degree of LL.D. from the University of Aberdeen. After 1805 he resided constantly in New York City and became well known as an able criminal lawyer. He published "A Descriptive Sketch of the Present State of Vermont," etc. Following are his two sons.

(a) John Hodges, naval officer, b. Vermont, 9 Mar., 1794; d. Newbury, N.H., 15 Mar., 1878. Entered the navy as midshipman, 18 June, 1812, promoted to Lieutenant, 5 Mar., 1817, and captain, 1849. He was placed on the reserved list, 1855, and made commodore on the retired list, 1867. He served in the War of 1812, and while a midshipman under Com. Chauncey on Lake Ontario, was one of twelve officers who took part in an expedition against

Introduction

The first part of the book is devoted to a general survey of the history of the subject. It begins with a brief account of the early attempts to explain the phenomena of life, and then proceeds to a more detailed consideration of the various theories which have been advanced from time to time. The author shows how the scientific method has been applied to the study of life, and how the various branches of biology have developed. He also discusses the importance of the subject in the history of civilization, and the part which it has played in the progress of human knowledge.

The second part of the book is devoted to a consideration of the various theories which have been advanced to explain the phenomena of life. It begins with a discussion of the theory of spontaneous generation, and then proceeds to a consideration of the theory of evolution. The author shows how the theory of evolution has been developed, and how it has been applied to the study of life. He also discusses the importance of the theory in the history of civilization, and the part which it has played in the progress of human knowledge.

the British stronghold opposite Block Island, N.Y. Nine of the party were killed or severely wounded. Among the latter was young Graham, who subsequently was compelled to submit to the amputation of his leg. In the engagement on Lake Champlain, 11 Sept. 1814, he had command of Commodore McDonough's flag-ship. After the declaration of peace Graham engaged in shore duty. Another son of John Andrew Graham was (b).

- (b) John Lorimer: lawyer, b. London, Eng., 20 March, 1797; d. Flushing, N.Y., 22 July 1876. Was admitted to the New York bar in 1821 and soon acquired a large practice. In 1834 he was appointed regent of the state univ., and from 1840 till 1844 was postmaster of New York city. He occupied important offices in the state militia, and in 1861 received an appointment in the treasury department at Washington. He was elected to the council of the Univ. of the city of New York, in which institution he founded a scholarship.

JOHN GRAHAM, diplomatist, b. in Dumfries, Prince William Co., Va., 1774; d. Washington, D.C., 6 Aug., 1820. He was graduated at Columbia in 1790, and emigrated to Kentucky where he represented Lewis Co. in the legislature. He was then sent by President Jefferson to the territory of Orleans as secretary, and subsequently held a similar office in the American legation in Spain. During the time when James Madison was secretary of state, Graham was chief clerk under him. In 1818 he accompanied a commission to obtain political information in Buenos Aires, and wrote an elaborate report which was printed by the state department. He was next sent by President Monroe as minister to the court of Portugal, then resident in Rio Janeiro. His health gave way under the Brazilian climate, and he died soon after his return to Washington. See his brother George (1772) on another page of this chapter.

JAMES DUNCAN GRAHAM, topographical engineer, b. Prince William Co., Va., 4 April 1799; d. Boston, Mass., 28 Dec., 1865; was grad. at the U.S. Military Academy, 1817, and became lieutenant of artillery. He was promoted several steps in this arm of the service, and employed on topographical duty, but it was not until 1829 until his specialty was recognized. He was then brevetted captain and afterward major, that he might enter the corps of topographical engineers, receiving the full commission of major in 1838. In 1839-40 he was the astronomer of the surveying party that, in behalf of the U.S., established the boundary line between the U.S. and the then new republic of Texas. In 1840 he was appointed commissioner for the survey and exploration of the north-east boundary of the United States, and was employed along the Maine and New York frontiers until 1843. He assisted in establishing the boundaries between the U.S. and the British provinces. In 1850 he was employed by the states of Md., Penna., and Del. to examine certain disputed questions regarding the boundary lines between those states, and was employed by the U.S. on questions resulting from the Mexican war. For ten years he had charge of harbor improvements on the northern and north-western lakes and was superintending engineer of the seawalls in Boston harbor at the time of his death.

JOSEPH GRAHAM (brother of George, 1758), soldier, b. Chester Co., Pa. 13 Oct., 1759; d. Lincoln Co., N.C., 12 Nov., 1836. At the age of nineteen he enlisted in the 4th regiment of North Carolina regular troops. He was with General Lincoln when the latter was maneuvering against Prevost, and was in the severe battle of Stono, 1779. He was appointed adjutant of the Mecklenburg regiment and saw considerable service, meeting the enemy while covering the retreat of Major Wm. R. Davie, near Charlotte, 1780. In this encounter he was cut down by a British dragoon, received six sabre thrusts and three bullet wounds. He later raised a company of mounted riflemen, and with fifty men disputed the passage of the British army at Cowan's ford. Afterwards appointed major of a legion of cavalry. With 136 men he defeated a band of 600 Tories. He erected iron works in Lincoln Co., 1792. In 1814 he was given command of 1,000 men to operate against the Creek Indians.

LAWRENCE PIKE GRAHAM (brother of James Duncan G. and William Montrose G., q.v.), soldier, b. Amelia Co., Va., 8 Jan., 1815; appointed 2nd licut. of the 2nd dragoons, 1837, subsequently 1st licut. and captain. In 1842 he served against the Seminoles and was in the battle of Lochahatchee. In the Mexican War he was breveted major for the gallantry at Pico Alto, and Resaca de la Palma, and promoted major, 1858; made licut.-Colonel, 1864, brigadier-general, 1865. In 1862 he raised and commanded a brigade of cavalry in the army of the Potomac. Afterwards acted as President of a general court-martial. Served with distinction in Civil War.

SYLVESTER GRAHAM, vegetarian, b. Suffield, Conn., 1792; d. Northampton, Mass., 11 Sept. 1851. His father was an English clergyman, a grad. of Oxford, who settled in Suffield, Conn. Sylvester began to teach at the age of nineteen. In 1832 he matriculated at Amherst with the intention of preparing for the ministry, but, having exhibited unusual powers as an elocutionist, he was denounced as a "stage actor" and a "mad enthusiast," and did not complete the course. However, he entered the Presbyterian ministry soon after his marriage, 1826. In 1850 he was employed by the Presbyterian temperance society as a lecturer and while thus engaged he became convinced that the prevention and cure of intemperance would be best achieved by the adoption of a purely vegetable diet, which he supposed would take away the desire for stimulants. He subsequently applied this theory to all forms of disease. He published (1852) "Graham's Lectures on the Science of Human Life," "Bread and Bread-Making," "A Lecture to Young Men on Chastity," "The Philosophy of Sacred History," etc.

(K) GRAHAM TOWNS, ETC.

See Reference 125.

There are in the United States, towns as follows:

" GRAHAM :"	Alabama	Montana
	Georgia	North Carolina
	Florida,	Oklahoma
	Iowa	Tennessee
	Kentucky	Texas
	Missouri	Washington
" GRAHAM STATION :"		West Virginia.
" GRAHAMSVILLE :"		New York.

There are also in the United States numerous counties, townships, streets, avenues, etc., bearing the name "Graham."

The above is eloquent testimony to the high esteem in which the name is held in this country.

Grahamstown is an important city in South Africa, named for a prominent Graham official who served in that province. Further information is given elsewhere in this volume.

To secure an estimate of the "Graham population" of the United States, we figure as follows:

Multiply
by

Only about half of the names were taken from each directory consulted - - - - - 2

Half of the population resides in small towns having no printed directories available to us, or in the country - - - - - 2

There are an average of more than four persons in each American family - - - - - 4

Since Graham daughters marry and have as many descendants as the Graham sons, there are as many Graham descendants of "other names" as there are bearing the name Graham, though it is much easier to locate the latter than the former - - - - - 2

By multiplying each figure of column (a) into the preceding figure, we have a total of - - - - - 32

CONSERVATIVE ESTIMATE OF THE GRAHAM POPULATION OF THE UNITED STATES, one-half of which bears the name "Graham" and one-half of which bears "other names" - - - - - -296,288

The estimated population of any of the above states may be obtained by multiplying by 32. There are Grahams in every state.

(M) RELIGIONS OF THE GRAHAMS.

Reference 110.

For several centuries nearly all the Grahams lived in Scotland. Most of the Scotch, and, likewise, the Grahams, were and are of the Presbyterian faith.

Practically all the Grahams who went from Scotland to the North of Ireland, and their descendants, remained Presbyterians.

The descendants of some of the Grahams who went from Scotland to England became members of the Church of England.

There were a few Grahams of the Catholic faith, in the British Isles, but it is estimated that their number did not exceed two per cent of the entire Graham population.

The Grahams who came from the British Isles to America continued in the faith of their fathers, for the most part, though their descendants in this country today will be found in the memberships of practically all the various churches. It is estimated that of all the Grahams in America who are church members, at least ninety-seven percent are of the Protestant faith.

Biographical sketches of eighteen Grahams appear in WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA (Ref. 110). Their religious faiths are shown as follows:

Christian- - - - -	1
Catholic - - - - -	0
Methodist - - - - -	1

(C) "THE GRAHAM MOVEMENT."

There is a greater interest in Genealogy in America today than there ever was before. Sociologists declare that "Genealogy" destined to play an important part in the socialization of the American people. Edmund Burke said "People will not look forward to posterity who never look backward to ancestors. There are more important reasons today than ever before for keeping genealogical records.

We dare say it gives you a feeling of pride to read these few pages regarding your family. We believe the traditions, ideals and standards of the GRAHAM family should be a source of pride to all who claim the name and blood of Graham.

Many American families have quite complete published Genealogies. Considerable has been published on the British Graham families, but apparently no attempt has ever been made to publish a Genealogy of "THE GRAHAM FAMILIES OF AMERICA."

A great amount of Graham data is available in government records and in the vital statistics of the various states, particularly of the original colonies; as well as in numerous other sources. This material is, however, "disconnected." If a general research were conducted, enough material could doubtless be assembled, and properly "connected," to comprise a large volume. A number of members of the Graham family have rather complete private collections of material on their respective branches of the family.

The compiler of "GRAHAM FAMILY RECORDS" and his associates would be interested in undertaking to produce a complete "GRAHAM GENEALOGY" if some member of the Graham<sup>family</sup> could be found with sufficient interest in the cause to help finance it.

"GRAHAM FAMILY ASSOCIATION"

There are a number of American families which are organized in permanent family associations. Most of them include a small circle of known relatives, rarely exceeding 200 or 300 in number. There are nearly 300,000 Grahams and Graham descendants in the United States (See Chapter (L)). While they may not all be closely related, they do have a common name and traditions, and it is believed that if the facts were known, nearly all of them could be properly connected with the "main lines" of the family. It is believed that a great many of the Grahams would be interested in joining such an association.

Such an association should have a constitution and by-laws, a staff of officers and should serve the following purposes:

(O) THE "GRAHAM MOVEMENT."

Promote sociability, hospitality, the spirit of kinship and the "cousinly feeling" among ourselves, give repeated expression of our honor and respect for our Graham ancestors; keep alive the traditions, standards and ideals of our fathers and mothers, keeping the name in the highest respect; impart the foregoing sentiments to our posterity; to keep family records up to date; to locate the graves of early Graham ancestors, to give them proper care and to erect suitable monuments upon some of them; to plan local and national reunions at such times and places as may seem advisable; etc., etc.

NATIONAL GRAHAM FAMILY REUNIONS.

Many American families hold reunions regularly every year, most of them being of a local character, and the attendance of some of them exceeding 500 persons. The Boston Transcript publishes a list of pending family reunions, every Thursday.

Local Graham family reunions have been held annually in many localities of the United States for many years. A National Reunion of all Grahams would be very interesting.

The facilities and connections of the American Historical-Genealogical Society are available to any members of the Graham family who desire to take the leadership in and to finance any "Graham movement."
